House passes Reagan tax cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan won the tax cut in history Wednesday when 481 House members defied their leaders and carried his multivote to a 238-195 margin in the House after it sailed through the Republican Senate.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said it was a big day for aristocracy, first a royal wedding and "this afternoon . . . a royal tax cut."

But Reagan, in the Oval Office, said his tax cut "has removed one of the most important remaining challenges to our agenda for prosperity . . .

Reagan celebrated the crowning of his economic recovery plan by saying "the victories we have won do not belong to any one individual or one party or one administration."

Angry Democratic leaders didn't see it that way. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said it was a big day for aristocracy, first a royal wedding and "this afternoon . . . a royal tax cut."

But Reagan, in the Oval Office, said his tax cut "has removed one of the most important remaining challenges to our agenda for prosperity . . .

"We have made a new beginning," he said. "We are back on the right road. We are making progress. And if we keep working together, we can reach that new era of prosperity we all want."

The House and Senate bills now go to a conference committee to work out the relatively few differences.

However the conference settles those issues, the bill provides a three-year, 25-percent, across-the-board reduction in personal tax rates, with the first small reduction starting Oct. 1. Congress favored that approach over a Democratic plan for a 15-percent, two-year cut favoring lower- and middle-income families. Democrats would have provided a three-year cut if the economy performed up to Reagan's expectations.

Forty-eight Democrats joined Republicans in the key House vote — the same coalition that produced major Reagan triumphs on the budget earlier in the year. Rep. James Jeffords, R-Vt., was the only GOP defector.

The Senate-House parlay settled the tax debate on Reagan's terms and so assured that his economic recovery plan will be implemented as he sought it. Earlier in the day, congressional negotiators completed work on the other half of that plan — $36 billion in federal spending cuts in fiscal 1982.

The margin of Reagan's victory in the House was swollen on the final vote only after the issue was settled. There was never any suspense in the GOP-controlled Senate.

Senate Finance Chairman Bob Dole, R-Kan., called the president's bill "a historic opportunity for the American people" and "a demonstration that we are changing direction in this country."

But Sen Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., assailed the bill as one which "provides the juiciest possible plums for the favored few and the meagerest pittance for those who need the help the most."

House Democratic leaders gave Reagan grudging credit for a "devastating" telephone lobbying campaign aimed mainly at conservatives who were torn between the president's tax-cut plan and the smaller version produced by the Ways and Means Committee.

"Let's see what happens," a glum O'Neill had told reporters. He would not repeat an earlier forecast that his troops had victory in hand, offering instead that "All I can say is that we are experiencing a (lobbying) blitz . . . like this nation has never seen. It's had a devastating effect."

Republicans want to cut personal tax rates 25 percent over the next three years, with the same cut going to rich and poor alike. Democrats, fearing a long-term tax reduction now would worsen inflation, offered a 15-percent cut over two years, with relief targeted more toward lower- and middle-income families. A three-year reduction would be allowed if inflation and interest rates are reduced in line with the Reagan administration's forecasts.

The president's plan, which was revised several times as he wooed conservative lawmakers, would cut taxes by more than $750 billion over the next five years. That includes automatically adjusting individual taxes each year, starting in 1985, to partially offset inflation.

Reagan's bill aims to increase savings and investments by individuals and business in a way that would increase productivity, thus providing a boost without inflation.

Millions tune in to view royal wedding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana began life as a married couple Wednesday in the quiet solitude of a country estate after a glorious wedding of music and majesty warmed by cheers of a million British and the world an estimated million television viewers watched as the future king and queen exchanged vows beneath the lofty dome of St. Paul's Cathedral. As the Archbishop of Canterbury pronounced them "man and wife together," the choir filled cavernous St. Paul's with a ringing psalm "O let the nations rejoice!" and the throngs outside, listening to loudspeakers, exploded with joy.

The union of the 32-year-old Prince of Wales with the 20-year-old earl's daughter marked the first time in three centuries that a British heir-apparent has married an English-born woman.

Scotland Yard had mounted what it called its "biggest ever security operation," with 5,000 police and troops along the teeming route of the royal processions of horse-drawn carriages. But as the ceremony ended, police reported only 10 arrests — half of them for pickpocketing.

But throughout the sun-filled Wednesday, from the first processions to the newlyweds' departure aboard the Royal Train on their honeymoon, London seethed with the excitement of a nation forgetting its woes for a spell of old-fashioned patriotic euphoria.

"Just for the moment," noted a British television commentator, "the world seems a nicer, easier and kinder place."

On Wednesday evening, the Royal Train carrying the couple arrived at Broadlands, a 6,000-acre estate 75 miles southwest of London that was the home of Charles' great uncle, the late Earl Mountbatten of Burma.

An estimated 1 million people, waving Union Jacks and sporting red-white-and-blue hats, lined the two-mile route between Buckingham Palace and the 300-year-old St. Paul's, the national cathedral.

The carriage of the queen, who was dressed in aquamarine and accompanied by Prince Philip, led the processions to the cathedral, wending through the heart of London and past the tumultuously happy crowds. Charles, in his naval commander's uniform, followed in another open landau carriage, his brother Andrew, 21, beside him.

Diana was the last to arrive, riding in The Glass Coach with the Clarence House, near the palace, with her father, the 8th Earl Spencer, at her side.

Her gown, topped by a jeweled family tiara and trailing a 25-foot train, was kept secret until the last moment.

Charles had predicted the stirring trumpet, organ and chime music of the 80-minute Church of England ceremony would move him to tears. He looked solemn, and several times brushed his hand across his face, but he apparently remained dry-eyed.

The newlywed couple signed the cathedral registry and proceeded, arm in arm, back up the red-carpeted aisle.

The prince and princess together rode back to the palace through the roaring throngs, the royal party following, with Diana's father joining the queen in her carriage, and her mother, Frances Shana Kydd, riding with Philip in another.

Social Security facing more optimistic future

WASHINGTON (AP) — New calculations by Social Security actuaries indicate the system is in better shape than the Reagan administration told Congress just three weeks ago.

The analysts now figure that with the benefit cuts already backed by Congress, Social Security's trust funds will stay in the black until the end of this decade unless the economy takes a real nosedive.

The administration is pressing for more cuts in early retirement, disability and other benefits to give the beleaguered program a wider margin of safety for the next five years and to avoid a deeper fiscal crisis in 30 or 40 years.

In their annual report to Congress on July 6, Social Security's trustees — three members of President Reagan's cabinet — warned that even under moderate economic projections, the combined trust funds would go broke by 1985.

But that did not take into account the elimination of the $122-a-month minimum benefit and college student benefits. Those steps, already endorsed by both houses of Congress, will save the system at least $22 billion by 1986.

Robert J. Myers, deputy commissioner of Social Security, revealed in response to questions Tuesday that the actuaries' new calculations show that under moderate economic assumptions the trust funds will stay out of trouble until 1989.

The trustees had said that only under optimistic assumptions or under the official Reagan administration forecast for economic recovery could the trust funds get by, and then only by a thin margin.

Even with the $22 billion in cuts, Social Security would run short of cash in 1984 or 1985 under pessimistic or "worst case" economic assumptions.

Reagan administration officials have cautioned Congress against taking a bare minimum of action to fix Social Security. They blame the lawmakers for accepting assumptions in 1977 that proved too rosy when they passed a payroll tax hike that was supposed to keep Social Security solvent until 2030.

Democrats contend Reagan's Social Security cuts go far deeper than necessary and may actually be intended to help balance the budget. Any cut in Social Security spending narrows the federal deficit.

Reagan has proposed cutting $88 billion in early retirement, disability and other benefits by 1986, while boosting benefits by $6.5 billion for the working elderly.

No one disputes that Social Security's biggest trust fund for Old Age and Survivors Insurance is in trouble. It has shrunk by $19 billion since 1975 and will fall below a level sufficient to pay a month's benefits late next year.

All sides, including Reagan, favor changing the law to allow the old-age fund to borrow from the healthier disability and Medicare funds, which are building up billion-dollar surpluses. However, the Medicare fund is expected to run into difficulties in the 1990s that could wipe it out.

Patriarchy sacrifices equality claims Sonia Johnson at rally

By DEBBIE GIUNTA
City Editor

Saying she would be willing to lay down her life for the Equal Rights Amendment, Sonia Johnson, co-leader of the LDS Church, said Tuesday the church is the most powerful organization opposing the amendment.

Speaking to more than 200 people assembled in the Women's Cultural Center in Provo, Ms. Johnson described her feminist conversion from "housewife to heretic."

She said at first she didn't want to be a renegade. "I just thought I could live through the women's movement and stay a good Latter-day Saint," she said. But she said her study led her to a point where she "couldn't sit still anymore."

She said the LDS Church has organized itself into anti-ERA lobbying groups in states where the amendment has not been ratified by legislators.

Ms. Johnson said she has always been "a very prayerful, devout person." She said she would describe herself as a Mormon first, then a wife, then a mother. "I was so glad to finally become just 'Sonia.'"

She said patriarchy is bred into people. "But you can't believe in patriarchy and equality at the same time."

"Patriarchy is a dying institution. It is damaging for men to be oppressors," she said.

"Patriarchal reversal" is the phenomenon she described in which the higher and loftier rhetoric used by men in talking to women, the harder the lid of oppression comes down on them, she said.

She said while women do two-thirds of the work in the world, they only earn one-tenth of the world's money. "That's slavery," she added.

She said no civil rights battle has ever been won without civil disobedience, of which some are afraid.

"Women have been taught that if they are loyal to men, they will not be allowed to live," she said. "Women are afraid of losing their 'credibility.'"

"What they don't realize is that because they are women they have no credibility," she said.

News Spotlight

Casey given OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Intelligence Committee unanimously concluded Wednesday that William J. Casey should remain as CIA director, but agreed to continue its investigation.

Chairman Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., told reporters after Casey had finished five hours of closed testimony on his past business practices and management of the agency. "It is the unanimous judgment of the committee that no basis has been found for concluding that Mr. Casey is not to be served as Director of Central Intelligence."

Israel, Syria clash

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli and Syrian jets clashed in a dogfight over Lebanon Wednesday, and each side claimed a kill. Israel vowed to continue its overflights, but the Palestine Liberation Organization warned that the spy missions put the Mideast on "the brink of total military confrontation."

Israel said in a military communique that its jets downed a Soviet-made MIG-25, the most advanced of Syria's planes, and returned safely from a "routine reconnaissance mission" over Lebanon.

Weteye suit filed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Two Utah citizens groups filed a federal court lawsuit Wednesday, saying the Army's plans to move 888 Weteye nerve gas bombs to Utah violates their civil rights.

ASBYU officers

Proxies authorized

By RALPH STEPHENSON
Staff Writer

In reaction to charges of summer absenteeism, several ASBYU Executive Council members have justified their absences and offered possible solutions to the absentee problem.

Amy Webb, Culture Office vice president, said before she went on vacation she followed the established procedure of writing a memo to ASBYU President Kay Haws.

"It (the memo) told the duration of my absence and who would assume my responsibilities," she said. "As for my replacement, we kept in contact on a weekly basis."

Miss Webb said she was absent for three weeks in July and would be gone an additional 10 days in August. Haws had said earlier Miss Webb would be gone the entire summer.

Haws authorized Miss Webb's replacement to vote and act in her place, she said.

"Kasey requested a written authorization for an assistant to take my place in my absence," said Sue Doughty, Student Community Services vice president. She said Haws had told her that her replacement was also authorized to vote and act for her.

Miss Doughty said she was not previously aware of ambiguities in the ASBYU bylaws concerning summer absenteeism. "We never heard anything about it until after the fact," she said.

Mike Thompson, Social Office vice president, said he submitted a memo to Haws stating how long he would be on vacation and who would assume his Social Office responsibilities. He also said his replacement was authorized to vote and act for him.

Jeff Andrus, Athletics Office vice president, who had also been absent, could not be reached for comment.

Susan Hollingsworth, ASBYU public relations director, had indicated only Miss Doughty's and Miss Webb's replacements were authorized to vote.

Alternatives

Jeff Hill, ASBYU Ombudsman, said he is in favor of a rotating vacation schedule for Executive Council members.

Such a vacation schedule would allow different officers to take one-week vacations at different times during the summer, thus maintaining the Executive Council quorum necessary for conducting business, he said.

"Personally, I think student body officers should have to be here during the summer," said Hill. "They shouldn't have to go to school, but they should have to keep their offices manned."

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and the Utah Peace and Human Environment Institute, Inc., are plaintiffs in the lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Salt Lake City that seeks a temporary restraining order to prevent the bombs from entering the state.

Bani-Sadr flees

PARIS (AP) — Abolhassan Bani-Sadr shaved off his highly recognizable moustache and fled to France Wednesday in an Iranian air force jet reported flown by the late shah's personal pilot. He was accompanied by Iran's top leftist, who said he hid the fugitive ex-president "in the heart of Tehran" for 43 days.

The Iranian regime said Bani-Sadr plucked his eyebrows and probably wore a dress when he boarded the plane.

Air strike hinted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air traffic controllers rejected a tentative contract by a better-than-9-1 margin, their union announced Tuesday, raising once again the threat of a strike that could ground half the nation's commercial flights.

The union's next move will be to ask the administration to resume negotiations. Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis has said he would be willing to talk about issues within the $40 million wage and benefits package.

The union has not set a strike deadline. Negotiations were not expected to resume until next week, union and government sources indicated.

Under this proposal, "When they're gone, they'll lose their opportunity to vote on the council," Hill said.

Council members would, in writing, appoint someone to represent their views to the council during their absences, but the appointees would have no voting powers, he said.

Hill said during July, when several Executive Council members were on vacation, "the appointed peoples' opinions at times were not at all representative of what the elected officers opinions would be."

He said no specific action has yet been taken to solve the absentee problem.

James VanLeishout, ASBYU Supreme Court chief justice, said no one has yet legally approached him about the ASBYU bylaw controversy. "We can do nothing," he said. "We have no power until a case is brought before us."

When asked who he thought would win such a case, VanLeishout declined to elaborate. "I'd have to hear the arguments for both sides," he said.

Provisions

Marc Francis, ASBYU attorney general, said there needs to be a provision in the new bylaws so the president can have the authority to keep a quorum throughout the year.

"I'll have it written pretty much before the fall semester begins," he said.

"I don't think there should be a bylaw saying there can be no vacations, nothing, during the summer," Miss Doughty said. She suggested absentee voting should be allowed only when absent council members inform the Executive President, by phone or in writing, of how they intend to vote.

Doug Bush, Finance Office vice president and acting ASBYU president during Haws's absence, said he would be in favor of a bylaw requiring Executive Council members to remain at BYU during the summer and allowing them a two-week vacation.

He suggested council members' replacements should never be allowed to vote. "Not allowing an absentee vote gets people to think about their responsibilities," he said.

Bill Hultenstrom, a Student Community Services assistant, said most ASBYU officers don't get a break between summer term and fall semester because of freshman orientation responsibilities.

Provo Commission approves dump site

By STEVE THOMSEN
Staff Writer

Continuing its battle for additional landfill space, the Provo City Commission approved the purchase of 10 acres of land adjacent to the existing dump site in southwest Provo, according to David Gunn, director of public services for the city of Provo.

"A year ago we were really in bad shape but we have met the challenge," Gunn said. "This year we've got three landfill sites to work with."

According to Gunn, the 10 acres, which were purchased for $16,000, will provide Provo with "at least three to five more years of landfill space before we might run into problems again."

He said the money used to acquire the land came from surplus funds in the Public Service Department's budget "which exist for these purposes."

Gunn said the Provo City Corp. will begin studies and engineering reports next month on the recently purchased 640 acres of land near Elberta which was approved for sanitary landfilling by the Utah County Board of Adjusters.

The Elberta Citizens Committee had originally protested the Provo dump site but Gunn said the complaints "have quieted down to the point that we haven't heard anything in the last couple of weeks."

"State geologists, county health groups and other agencies have studied the area and no one thinks the landfill project will create any problems. It sits on a fairly barren piece of land," he said.

Gunn said Provo will also use a proposed landfill site in Provo Canyon for "dirt, rocks, asphalt and concrete," in order to allow for better use of the existing city landfill.

"By putting clean fill in the canyon site it will help with the existing landfill space problem by lengthening the limited space that is available to the city at the moment," he said.

Gunn said Provo City will contour and re-seed the Provo Canyon and Elberta landfill areas following their use. "We will only be using an acre or two at a time," he added.

He said the city would probably begin the canyon landfill project next year and would not begin landfilling in Elberta "or at least three more years."

The United States Air Force honor guard carries the casket of Richard Van Dyke to its final rest in the Provo Cemetery. The casket is followed by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Van Dyke, and his older brother Milton William.

The honor guard stands at attention as a member presents a United States flag to Mrs. Van Dyke. The flag was presented "in remembrance of the patriotic duty performed by your loved one."

Coming Home

The roar was there a split second before they could be seen. Then, startlingly they appeared out of the southern sky — four F-105 Air Force jets suspended in perfect formation as they flew over the Provo Cemetery. Just as suddenly, the four aircraft appeared again in formation to the south, but this time, off to the east, a lone jet kept pace, signifying a man come home.

The body of Air Force Captain Richard Van Dyke, shot down in Vietnam 13 years ago, was buried Tuesday with full military honors. Van Dyke's body was one of three returned to the United States July 7th by Hanoi.

To Van Dyke's family, the return ended more than a decade of uncertainty during which Van Dyke was "presumed dead."

And to thousands of relatives of the 2,490 Vietnam servicemen still missing, it brought hope of an eventual accounting.

With the sharp retort of a 21-gun salute and the lonely, piercing echo of taps played by a bugler, the United States Air Force paid a last tribute to the young Mormon serviceman who died just a few months after his arrival in Indochina.

"On behalf of the United States Air Force, I offer this flag in remembrance of the patriotic duty performed by your loved one," a member of the Air Force honor guard said, as he handed the folded flag, taken from Van Dyke's casket, to his weeping mother, Kay Van Dyke.

A silver MIA bracelet hooked over the casket handle bore the simple engraving: Capt. Richard Van Dyke, 9-11-68. Worn for a decade by a woman who bought it to support efforts to bring missing servicemen home, the bracelet had at last served its purpose.

The man had come home.

Spencer J. Condie

By YOLANDA MENDILOLA
Staff Writer

BYU students need to emulate a form of godliness and use the power of the spirit in their lives, said Dr. Spencer J. Condie at Tuesday's Devotional assembly.

Condie, a well-known sociologist, LDS stake high councilman and stake Young Men's president, emphasized how often people who have a form of godliness will deny the power thereof.

"I express a prayer of gratitude that I belong to a church which has both a form of godliness and the power of God," he said.

Condie said the Lord revealed in Section 84 of the Doctrine and Covenants that "... in the ordinances of the gospel the power of godliness is manifest."

He told students that serving within the church becomes arduous to anyone who does not have the spirit of the Lord. "While I suffer thy terrors I am distracted," Condie quoted David from Psalms.

Condie also said if an individual is in tune with the spirit, "the powers of heaven can and do dispell upon us, drenching us with joy in serving the Lord through service to others. It is then that our confidence waxes strong before God and the Holy Ghost becomes our constant companion."

He quoted President Harold B. Lee as saying, "The safety of the church lies in the members keeping the commandments."

Condie said sometimes people within the church become concerned with numbers until human relationships are impaired. "People become pawns in a quantitative quest for perfection," he said.

Condie paraphrased the apostle Paul as saying the church was organized to perfect the saints. This perfecting, said Condie, is made possible "by speaking the truth in love."

He told students to take initiative in learning about the gospel and in finding meaning to their lives.

"When fishing, the fish must take some of the initiative in order to swim into the gospel net, and therein one finds an eternal meaning to one's life," he said.

Condie told students "Sunday Neurosis" has been described by the Viennese psychiatrist, Viktor Frankl, as a type of depression "which afflicts people who become aware of the lack of content in their lives when the rush of the busy week is over, and the void within themselves becomes manifest."

Condie told students to consider who they were on Sundays and what they did with their time when they were not in church meetings.

"Is the Sabbath a day of spiritual regeneration or one of emptiness and boredom, devoid of celestial content?" he asked.

Condie told the audience to exercise the power of God, instead of just representing it physically. "The Gospel really is true ... and it helps to solve the emptiness in hearts," he said.

"When we are engaged in the service of our fellow men, not only are we willing to assist them but we put our own problems in perspective. When we concern ourselves more with other there is less time to be concerned with ourselves. By losing ourselves, we find ourselves. The more we serve our fellow men in the appropriate place, the more substance there is to our souls; indeed, it is easier to find ourselves because there is so much we have to find."

Condie said in quoting President Spencer K. Kimball.

Dr. Spencer J. Condie addresses students in Tuesday's Devotional assembly. Condie urged students to recognize the Lord's influence and use the power of his spirit in their lives.

Timp hikes face limitations

By NOLAN CRABB
Senior Reporter

The ASBYU Athletics Office is sponsoring a hike up Mt. Timpanogos Saturday. But if officials of the U.S. Forest Service office have their way, such group hikes will be a thing of the past by next summer.

Kent Traveller, resource assistant for the local Forest Service office, said he is concerned about large groups of people hiking up the mountain because of the major impact such hiking could have on the resources in the area.

"We're not trying to limit the number of hikers on the mountain," he said. "Our aim is to make the mountain available to everyone and do it in such a way as to prevent serious damage to the trail and the surrounding area."

Traveller said large groups are partially responsible for the damage done to resources on the mountain.

"We've had a problem for years with trail maintenance on the Aspen Grove side of the Timp scenic area," he said. Most of the damage is caused by people who stray off the trail and come up with their own switches and cuttings."

Traveller said large groups have hiked the mountain in years past, doing some damage to resources in the area.

Group regulation

"Frankly, we want to nip this problem in the bud," he said. "We're drafting a document that will bring about a regulated limit on the size of groups that can hike the scenic route. It will probably not go into effect until next summer."

Mike Downey, chairman of the Athletics Office hike committee, said in spite of suggestions from the Forest Service that the hike be cancelled, the hike will go as planned.

He said 52 people are currently signed up for the hike, with more expected to sign up before Friday's deadline. Those interested in signing up for the hike may do so in 327 ELWC. Downey said $1 will be charged for each person signing up.

The fee will cover transportation costs and watermelon. Vans will leave at 6:30 a.m. Saturday from the J. Reuben Clark Law School parking lot.

"We're expecting maybe 100 people when the signing is over," Downey said. "I think what the Forest Service is worried about is the large groups that used to hike Timp every year when they had 'Hike Timp Day.'"

"Thousands used to turn out for that hike. But this won't be nearly as large a group," Downey said.

Trail damage

"The big problem is people straying off the trail," Traveller said. "If the groups would stay on the trail itself, things would be fine. But our experience has shown that many don't stay within the trail, and that causes problems."

"I know nobody is out to deliberately damage the resources," he said, "but there are problems that occur with large groups. Even when they stop hiking to have lunch, their impact is felt as far as the resources are concerned."

Downey said the group hiking the mountain Saturday will be strictly monitored by group leaders from the Athletics Office to insure that hikers stay on the trail.

"We're going to carefully watch everyone and remind them to stay within the trail," Downey said. "We're also going to spread them out over the time. In other words, we're going to divide them into smaller groups and send them out over 20-minute periods."

But Traveller said spreading hikers out would do little to alleviate the potential resource damage.

"You could spread them out over an hour apart," he said. "The thing you have to remember is that people travel at differing speeds. By the time everybody gets to the top, you'd pretty well have them all bunched together anyway."

Traveller said he favored as many people hiking the mountain as wanted to, but rather than sending small groups out in 20-minute periods, groups should be spread out over days.

Y professors considered for Congressional seat

By KYLE STEPHENS
Staff Writer

Three BYU professors are among the several potential candidates already being mentioned for Utah's new third seat in the U.S. House of Representatives, according to local political leaders.

LaVern Sparks, Utah County Republican chairman, said Lee Farnsworth, Howard Nielson and Raymond Beckham are frequently mentioned as possible contenders for the new seat.

"As a party we've made no endeavor to search out candidates yet," Sparks said. Sparks explained that the official endorsement of the Republican Party can come only after the winner of the primary election emerges.

The general election for the new congressional seat takes place November 1982.

Farnsworth, a political science professor and current representative and Majority Whip in the Utah House of Representatives, was contacted Monday in Atlanta where he is on vacation. Farnsworth confirmed that his name has been mentioned to run for the seat.

"I'm flattered," Farnsworth said. "I haven't really made up my mind. It's a real hard choice to make."

Farnsworth, however, said he thought it was premature to speculate about the contenders for the seat because the Legislature has yet to vote on what the exact boundary lines of the new district will be.

"The lines aren't drawn yet; that will make a great difference as to who the candidate will be," Farnsworth said.

Farnsworth also confirmed that he has recently been asked by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, to assist him in his 1982 senatorial campaign.

Farnsworth ran the Utah County campaign for Rep. Jim Hansen, R-Utah, last year against Democratic incumbent Rep. Gunn McKay.

Farnsworth is a four-term member of the Utah House.

Nielson, a professor of statistics and former Majority Leader and Speaker of the Utah House, was looking "very seriously" at running for the new seat.

"I feel my experience in the legislative and executive branch would qualify me," Nielson said. He also stressed that his background in statistics, economics and local and state politics as factors in favor of his candidacy.

According to Nielson, his professional background in these areas would be particularly helpful because of Congress' dealings in fiscal tax and budget matters.

"I also have a political background that would be useful," Nielson said.

Nielson said he organized BYU's statistics department in 1960, and has also been associate commissioner of finance for the Utah system higher education.

Beckham, a professor of communications, is former director of the BYU Alumni Association and a former director of the BYU Development Office.

Beckham is currently in Fort A.P. Hill, Virginia, at the National Boy Scout Jamboree and could not be reached for comment.

He is serving as the Western region Mormon chaplain at the jamboree, and is also president of the BSA Utah National Parks Council.

Beckham is a Regional Representative for the LDS Church and is a former LDS Church mission president.

Jed Richardson, a former BYU faculty member who in 1978 and 1980 was a congressional candidate from Utah County, has also been mentioned by political insiders as a possible contender for the new seat.

But Richardson, who is now a staff member of the U.S. Senate's Labor and Human Resources Committee in Washington, D.C., said he does not plan to run next year.

Orem City Council penalizes Heathman in land dispute

By DEBBIE HERMAN
Senior Reporter

Appointed with Harry Heathman's contract to develop a contracted car dealership at 2000 South, the Orem City Council voted unanimously to retain a $100-a-day penalty until the termination of the contract between Heathman and the city this September. Heathman bought 18 acres of land from the city in the fall of 1977 and contracted with the city to build a car dealership by April 1980. Heathman, Orem City director of planning and zoning, said Heathman was given a good deal of land based only on the premise that a dealership would be developed. When Heathman signed the contract with the city, he owned a car dealership in Provo. He subsequently sold this dealership to Edna. Orem City Mayor James E. Mangum said he did not know Heathman had sold his dealership while at the same time negotiating with the city on the land agreement and the sale of industrial revenue bonds. Mangum told Heathman that as the council extended Heathman's contract before, Heathman had had sufficient time to develop a dealership. Stout said Heathman would not be able to develop another dealership. The council had previously extended Heathman's contract in November to the deadline of May 1981. The $100-a-day penalty began at this time because the dealership had not been developed.

Heathman's attorney, Jerry Thorn, told the council at Tuesday night's meeting that high interest rates, unforeseen problems in obtaining a franchise agreement with General Motors and a dispute between Heathman and Higgins have caused delays.

Higgins said he is not aware of any dispute with Heathman.

Higgins also said he is not affected by the termination of Heathman's Orem City contract. Higgins said he owns the exclusive franchise rights to Chevrolet-Buick and is consequently protected anyway from any infringement from Heathman.

Thorn also told the council that while Heathman had sold the dealership, the agreement between Heathman and Higgins included a clause stipulating that Higgins will move the dealership to Orem. Higgins said he was not aware of this stipulation.

The city must reimburse Heathman if the contract is terminated for both the cost of the land and for improvements. Stout said the city will want the land back.

Higgins said he plans to move his Provo dealership because of his need for a new facility.

Covey to talk at seminar

By STEVE EATON
Senior Reporter

BYU students may hear Stephen R. Covey, associate professor of organizational behavior and business management, speak in a seminar that has been presented in several major cities at the cost of $125 a person, for $10, according to a representative of the Management Programs Office.

Rick White, coordinator of management programs with the division of continuing education, said the seminar may be the last time for many to hear Covey, because he is taking a leave of absence to devote more time to write three books he has been working on.

Covey will be giving more than a half dozen more seminars in the coming months, but in other cities, White said.

The seminar, "Seven Basic Habits of Highly Effective People," will only be in Provo one day. Then Covey will be off to San Diego, Portland, Ore., Seattle, Salt Lake City, Honolulu, Washington, D.C., Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Phoenix, Ariz.

Covey said he has trained more than 25,000 managers and leaders over the past year in his work as a consultant and lecturer. He said this all-day seminar is to be a synthesis of his consulting experience during the last decade.

This is the first time this seminar will be offered in Provo. White said when Covey gave it in Los Angeles, about 200 seats were sold at $125 and 150 people paid the same price in San Francisco.

Covey said the seminar is being offered to Utah County residents at the lower rate as a public service.

The registration fee is $20 for Utah County residents who are not BYU students.

White said if sales continue at the rate they are now he expects about 300 to attend Friday's seminar. "He can probably draw larger crowds than just about anybody here because he is well-liked by the people at BYU," White said.

"Unless something freakish happens, like 1,000 people showing up," White said, "there will still be registration at the door." White said the seminar has been well received so far in the other places it has been given.

According to White, registration for the seminar will begin at the JSB Auditorium at 8 a.m. Friday for those who do not register with Management Programs, 242 HRCB, today. The seminar is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Besides teaching at BYU, Covey is a consultant. Covey said he has to turn down five offers for every one he is able to accept.

Keyte Hansen, the manager of education and field training for Northwestern Mutual Life of Milwaukee, said for the last three years Covey has been participating in a career forum given for qualified employees.

Hansen said the employees rate him as their favorite lecturer in the forum.

"He has a unique ability to get people to look introspectively and improve themselves," Hansen said.

Hansen said the forums are set for 25 to 35 carefully selected employees. They are each given a copy of one of Covey's books, "How to Succeed With People." They are also given a chance to buy another of Covey's books, "The Spiritual Roots of Human Relations." Hansen said he has sold over 500 copies.

"Most of the people who attend are non-Mormons," Hansen said. "He (Covey) does weave the spiritual into his presentation."

Covey said he just teaches the gospel in a language people can understand.

Shoot-out canceled for ASBYU game

The ASBYU-sponsored double jeopardy shoot-out has been cancelled, in addition to some other changes, according to an ASBYU Social Office representative.

Lon Elkington, special events director for the ASBYU Social Office said more than 150 participants of the double jeopardy game have not been shot.

Instead, four deadlines have been scheduled. The first is Friday at 5 p.m. "All participants should have their contracted victims killed by that time," Miss Elkington said.

Monday at noon will be the second deadline, and surviving participants will need to submit their victims' contracts to the ASBYU Social Office. The third deadline will be Wednesday at 5 p.m., she said.

Farm hand arrested on rape charge

A 22-year-old transient farm worker was arrested early Wednesday by Springville Police in connection with a July 22 rape of a Provo woman.

Lt. Warren Grossgebauer of the Provo Police Department reported the arrest of Eugenio Vigill Garnica of Mexico in connection with last week's aggravated sexual assault.

He said a formal complaint would be filed against Garnica and then he would be arraigned.

Detective Glade Terry, the investigating officer, was responsible for obtaining the description of Garnica that was distributed to other police agencies which led to the arrest of the suspect by Springville police.

The charge is a second degree felony that carries a one to 15 year sentence.

Curt Brinkman

A wheelchair whiz

By BRENT JONES

In 1980, the record for the Boston Marathon was smashed by a man in a wheelchair. Curt Brinkman, who lost his legs at 16, blazed to the finish line with a time of 1:55.00.

Brinkman, a former BYU student and currently a resident of American Fork, got his first taste of competition when he entered a 21-mile walkathon as a wheelchair participant to raise funds at Ricks College. He and his wife raised one-quarter of the total cash of that walkathon.

The next year, Brinkman decided he could do even better. "I decided to do a longer trip to raise even more money, so I went 120 miles just jumping into something and going after it. I was handicapped," he said. The Brinkmans raised $1,200 for the handicapped.

He then tried his hand at basketball and, to the dismay of competitors throughout the nation, Brinkman discovered marathons.

In 1977 he entered his first marathon, the big one at Boston, and became hooked on the sport after pushing full-bore for 26 miles to finish second. The following summer, he entered the 1,500 meter run and broke that record before competing in Holland.

Diabetic

One year before the 1980 Boston Marathon, Brinkman discovered he was a diabetic. "At the time I thought, 'This is my last year, I'm not going to be able to compete anymore, I'm a diabetic. I won't be able to do well, but I'll get out there and do my best.' Then I won it and it just blew me away," he said. Brinkman has competed in 14 marathons in five years, finishing first in eight of those races.

He has a lot going on in his life. He manages the Deseret Industries store in American Fork; trains for races by working out seven to 15 miles each day, six days a week; has speaking engagements three to four times each week; looks after his family; is involved in church activities; has written a book; and is in the process of writing a second book.

According to Brinkman, maintaining consistency in the pursuit of one's goals is more important than going after a goal full out.

"I think consistency is important in everything that we do. A lot of times we get excited about something, so we go all out trying to do real well and we get tired of it fast. If we're consistent and work at a slower rate and keep at it we don't burn out. The excitement continues to build," said Brinkman.

Training program

Brinkman said he uses consistency in his training program. "A lot of people think I just hop into a wheelchair and I go out and run in a race and do well. I have to do a lot of training, and it causes a lot of pain," he said.

"Those people who do things well realize that it doesn't come by just jumping into something and going after it. You have to put a lot of work into it," he said.

Following a near-fatal electrical accident 11 years ago that took both his legs, he received a lot of help and support from his family and friends. He said he learned to accept his condition and is open about it. "I've had a lot of help, and I feel I got an opportunity to help others now."

Brinkman is open about the fact that he lost his legs. "I hope that the way I am candid about the fact that I don't have legs will make people more comfortable around others who are different," he said.

One of the major motivating forces behind Brinkman's success is his spirit of competition and his insatiable desire to win. He said one of his desires is to show people they too can become champions in their own pursuits.

"I want to show that we can do things if we really want to. We feel good about the things we're doing, and if we are successful, that leads to a happy life. That is what's important," he said.

Former BYU student Curt Brinkman trains for his next race. Brinkman, who has competed in 14 marathons during the last five years, won the Boston Marathon wheelchair division in 1980.

After a long wait, Gifford Nielsen is finally a starting quarterback in the NFL. According to Nielsen, his club — the Houston Oilers — is planning to throw the ball a lot more this year.

Giff gets his shot

By CARRIE LUNT

Staff Writer

With the retirement of Houston quarterback Ken Stabler, ex-BYU star Gifford Nielsen has been given the Oilers' reins.

"Everyone has a positive attitude here in Houston," Nielsen said in an exclusive telephone interview from the Oilers' San Angelo, Texas, training camp Wednesday. "It's a new situation. We'll have a great year."

Nielsen was a high school football and basketball star here in Provo. He attended BYU and was the Cougars' starting quarterback in parts of the 1976 and 1977 seasons. He took over the quarterbacking duties after the fifth game of the '76 season. In '77 he was the starting quarterback when the season began, but was shelved with an injury after the Oregon State game.

When Nielsen did play he was spectacular. Before the injury ended his college career, he led the nation in passing yardage, passed for a career total of 5,833 yards and was touted as a leading candidate for the Heisman Trophy.

He was drafted by the Oilers in 1978 and served as a backup quarterback his rookie year to Dan Pastorini.

During the '79-'80 season, he had his first real chance in a playoff game against San Diego to show Houston fans what he could do. When Pastorini was sidelined with injuries early on, Nielsen came in and performed like a veteran, guiding the Oilers to a 17-14 win.

Last season was a frustrating one for Nielsen as he played behind a top-form Stabler. Nielsen completed only two of four passes, spending most of his time on the field holding the ball for kicker Tomi Fritsch.

But now, first-year Oiler coach Ed Biles is counting on Nielsen to take the lead. "We don't even have a backup quarterback yet," Nielsen said.

said, "We're trying out a bunch of guys right now."

The Oilers will try out new ideas as well as players this season with a new coach, a new quarterback calling his own plays and a new offensive strategy.

"We have a new offensive philosophy here at Houston," Nielsen explained. "We'll use the wide-open attack with a lot of passing, similar to the style of offense BYU has. I'll feel at home with it. Of course, with players like Earl Campbell in your backfield you can't pass as much as you can at BYU. We'll be running the ball well, too."

Nielsen has changed as a quarterback since joining the pros, but not as a person.

The 6-3 signal-caller has gained seven pounds since leaving BYU and is now up to 210. He will make his debut as a starting quarterback, if all goes well, in a home pre-season game against the NFC-champion Philadelphia Eagles Aug. 6.

"You have to change your football mentality when you go from college to pro ball," Nielsen said. "The players are a lot better and there is a lot more pressure because everyone is out there to support their families, to make a living. Pro football is enjoyable, but the pressure is rough."

Nielsen said his family is reacting well to the added pressure now that he is a starting NFL quarterback. "Wendy (Nielsen's wife) has always handled herself well under the pressure. But we have four children now and she has a lot to worry about besides me."

As a Mormon, Nielsen has always been concerned about the example he is to his teammates. "They all know where I'm coming from," Nielsen stated. "I've learned that I can't be a hypocrite. I live my standards. I've also learned that there are many good people in the world of different faiths and I respect their beliefs."

Festival winners collect medals

SYRACUSE, N.Y.

(AP) — Bobby Carpenter and his New England teammates stepped out of the fog of disorganization that has enveloped them at the National Sports Festival and won the bronze medal in the hockey competition Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the Midwest women's basketball team beat the West 87-82 for a bronze.

Center, Richie Costello, Mark Kumpel and Steve Lyons scored two goals each as New England beat the West 10-6.

Later, the Great Lakes and Central hockey teams were to play for the gold medal on the final day of the six-day competition in 33 sports.

In men's basketball, the West was playing the south for the gold, and the East met the Midwest for the bronze.

The East women were playing the south for the basketball gold medal.

The New England hockey team had not played up to expectations, in spite of the fact that they had won the bronze medal in the hockey competition Wednesday.

But Wednesday Carpenter and Costello, who also has been offered a scholarship to Providence College.

Winless in three round-robin games, New England's players did not move well as a unit.

But Wednesday Carpenter and Costello, who also is expected to enter Providence College if he doesn't sign with an NHL team, shot New England into a 3-0 lead in the first period.

In the second period, Kumpel scored at 14:42, and Lyons had a pair at 17:15 and 17:37.

In the third period, John Leavitt, Kumpel, Chris Pryor and Costello completed the scoring.

Costello had four assists. Kumpel and Lyons assisted on two goals for the pre-tournament favorites.

New England goalie Cleon Daskalakis of Boston University made 23 saves, few of them difficult, as he posted the first shutout of the hockey competition.

The Midwest finished 1-3.

Cathy Boswell of Illinois State scored 18 points in the Midwest gold medal basketball victory. Paula Redo of Wichita State added 14.

The Midwest surged ahead in the second period and led 43-36 at halftime.

Paula and Pam McGee, twins, paced the West. Paula had 28 points, Pam 11.

The Festival, which is staged by the U.S. Olympic committee for American athletes in non-Olympic years, included 2,500 athletes in various sports. This is the third time the Festival has been held, and some sports attract quality fields. On drew only fledgling athletes and competition was spotty.

Americans take cage final

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kevin Magee scored a game-high 31 points Wednesday to lead the United States to a thrilling 93-87 victory over the Soviet Union in the men's basketball final at the World University Games.

Jill Sterkel secured her fifth swimming gold medal as part of the 400-meter women's medley relay team and Kim Linnehan won the women's 400-meter freestyle swimming final. But the U.S. still had to settle for third place on the final medals table, behind the Soviets and Romania.

The host nation nipped the Americans by 30 goals to 29 by defeating Cuba 3-2 in men's volleyball competition, the final event of the 10-day games.

The Soviets collected only one gold medal on the final day of competition — in the men's 400-meter medley relay swimming — but still finished with 38 gold medals.

Magee, 22, a forward from the University of California at Irvine, helped give the U.S. team a 45-41 halftime lead over the Soviets.

The Americans maintained their lead despite losing momentum briefly in the final moments.

Magee looked unstoppable against the towering Soviet front line of Vladimir Tkachenko and Alexander Belenitski.

"He was playing against two of the finer big men in the world," said U.S. Coach Tom Davis of Boston College. "It is very tough to play against men of that caliber."

Howard Carter of Louisiana State scored 17 points for the Americans, while the top Soviet scorer was Nikolai Derugin with 21.

Sterkel, who attends the University of Texas, matched Romanian gymnast Nadia Comaneci as the outstanding individual of the games. Each won five gold medals.

City commission OKs hotel funds

The Provo City Commission voted Tuesday to release more than $2.2 million in federal grant funds designated for the construction of the Provo Excelsior Hotel and adjacent parking facility, according to Mayor James Ferguson.

The majority of the funds received from the Department of Housing and Urban Development grant will be used to finance a parking garage which will be constructed adjacent to the 225-unit, $13 million hotel and convention center, he said.

According to Ron Madsen, director of redevelopment for the city of Provo, the new parking garage will provide parking for the hotel, and "some of the spaces will probably be controlled public parking for downtown businesses and shopping areas."

According to Madsen, the release of the federal money was conditional upon the city receiving "environmental clearance" for the hotel project which will be located at 150 W. 100 North.

Madsen said Provo redevelopment has considered several other revitalization projects for the downtown area which would include a "historic preservation of many of the city's older stores and shopping centers."

Computer speeds Y loans

By MENDY SIMPSON Staff Writer

Changes in short-term loan processing and payment will provide speedy and efficient service for the Financial Aids Office as well as the student, according to the financial aids director.

"In the past, the student would pick up the loan application, make an appointment with a loan officer, then return for the appointment," said Ford Stevenson, director of financial aids.

The application would then go to the loan committee for approval, he said. If approved, the student would have to return to the office to pick up the payment voucher, submitting it with his class confirmation to take care of fees.

"Now the student does not have to personally show up," Stevenson said. "We have eliminated the interview."

According to Stevenson, the student now submits an application and the computer gathers all the available information at the university where it is synthesized and taken to the loan committee.

If the loan is approved, "we mail the promissory note," Stevenson said. After the student signs it, the note is then included with his class confirmation when returned to the university.

Stevenson said in a Financial Aids Council meeting Thursday, "We established the fact that only students receiving the BEOG (Basic Educational Opportunity Grant) and GSL (Guaranteed Student Loan) will be permitted to make lump-sum payments on their short-term loans.

Last year there was an increase of students who were unable to make the balloon payment," he said.

Ma Mariotti and Rula Knight help Dan Ferguson, a senior majoring in recreational management from Peterborough, Ontario, Canada, fill out forms for his cap and gown. Turnover for ordering the caps and gown has been slow.

Caps and gowns

Seniors delay orders

cap and gown order deadline for August graduation is today, but a large percentage of seniors have not yet submitted their orders to the Alumni House, according to an Alumni House employee.

Year nearly 1,400 students ordered caps and gowns for the August commencement. This July 637 students had ordered them as of Tuesday, said cap and gown coordinator Rula Knight.

"The caps and gowns must be ordered from the Alumni House," said James Burton, business manager of the Alumni House. "I'm sure they (students) will realize we have to order them from Chicago. We need the time to have them delivered."

"Ordering is going slowly, Mrs. Knight said. "From looking at the daily accumulation sheets, we are running less than 50 percent" as compared with last year's figures.

"There are several possible reasons for the lull in ordering, she said. "Students are most likely preoccupied with finals and job interviews."

According to Mrs. Knight, graduating seniors should have received an information packet in the mail containing graduation information including deadlines and order forms. Additional packets are also available at the Alumni House.

Unstable complaint filed

By JEFF RUFFOLO Senior Reporter

According to a complaint filed in the 4th District Court, Raeldon Palmer, a constable in Santaquin, is seeking repeal of a Utah County Ordinance which set up the Utah County Constable complaint says, "For over the last two years Don Forsyth (Utah County Constable) by action or by criminal complaint, has sought to have the plaintiff in order that said defendant Forsyth might gain an unconstitutional monopoly on the power of constable within Utah County."

"The complaint charges, 'For over the last two years, said defendant (Forsyth), who has charged among the highest fees in the state of Utah, to reap windfall profits not possible to any other constable in the State of Utah.'"

"The complaint asks the court to repeal Utah County Ordinance No. 1978-3 which gives the Utah County Commission authority to organize Utah County Constable Office."

"The complaint is seeking a brand new start," Palmer said. "If the Utah County Constable office were abolished, the county could have 10 appointable constables for the 10 incorporated cities of Utah County."

"Palmer said if the county ordinance were repealed, Forsyth would neither gain nor lose his position."

"Palmer said he could be appointed by Orem City as a constable, and still keep his office and position as he has set it up," Palmer said.

"Palmer said if state law was followed 'then my position as a constable is valid. Anyone in Utah more than 21 years old, and is given the authority by a justice of the peace, could be a constable.'"

According to Palmer, state law allows the appointed individual to carry a gun, wear a uniform, carry official identification and work as a constable anywhere in the state.

According to Palmer's attorney, Berk W. Washburn, the criminal case scheduled Aug. 4 against his client may be postponed.

"We hope to have the criminal suit delayed until the 4th District Court has a chance to rule on our plea to repeal the county ordinance," he said.

"There were two cases that Forsyth brought against Palmer," Washburn said. "We hope to have those charges postponed until some future date."

"I know Raeldon Palmer does not have any authority to be a constable in Utah County," said Forsyth.

Forsyth said Palmer has no authority to act as constable because he is only appointed to be a constable in Santaquin City, and not in the other cities of the county.

"Palmer is not an elected officer of the city," Forsyth said. "How can a Santaquin judge give constable authority to a non-elected individual?"

Forsyth said the Aug. 4 case deals with Palmer calling himself the Utah County Constable, when that title was given to Forsyth through a county election in 1979.

"I hope that the courts do rule on the exact difference between a county ordinance and a state law," Forsyth said.

THE SACRED IN LITERATURE

Is there anything redeeming in the plethora of writing that concentrates on worldliness, sin, and wasted lives? Should we dwell on failure? Why then do we encourage our students to read novels, like Crime and Punishment and Madame Bovary, whose principal characters are murderers and adulterers? Oddly enough, we find the best reason and strongest precedent for doing so in the holy scriptures.

Textbook prices to increase

By NOLAN CRABB
Senior Reporter

It doesn't take a math major to figure out that the cost of education is going up.

BYU, like every other university in the country, is being affected by inflation and its side effects.

Tuition isn't the only increase BYU students will feel this fall. Students will have to pay more for books.

"Many of the textbook increases come twice a year," said Roger Utley, bookstore manager. "The publishers work the increases in such a way as to equal the inflation factor."

Utley said unlike other markets, textbook publishers decide for themselves how much a book will cost.

"The publisher will figure into that final price his costs in putting together the book and author royalties and so forth," Utley said. "They may suggest the book stores sell their book with a 20 percent mark on."

He said some publishers may wish to sell their book for $10, but they would give the book stores a 20 percent discount on the book. The invoice would come to the book store for $10 minus the 20 percent.

"But after we get the invoice, we also have to figure freight and handling," Utley said. "The freight and handling charge could come to 50 cents per book. That leaves the book store a $1.50 margin. That just doesn't go too far when you figure we have to pay the overhead expenses and process the book for sale."

Utley said the university doesn't subsidize the book store. "It's run very much like any other business," he said. "We have to pay the rent on the space we use at the ELWC, and there are other overhead expenses involved. It takes about 26 cents of every dollar we take in to pay the overhead and other expenses involved in processing the book."

Utley said there are times when a student who is hunting a bargain can find one in the textbook shelves.

"We don't mark up an old book when we get a bulletin from the publisher saying the price has increased," he said. "If there's a book around from last winter semester, we aren't going to go out on the floor and remark that book. If a student wants to rot through each of the shelves, he can possibly find a new book at last winter's price."

Utley said considering the prices on used books, there could be as many as three different prices on books.

"It all depends on what the students want," he said. "They can buy the used book, or they can look for a book priced at the old price."

Fulbright Fellowship

Y graduate gets research grant

By MICHAEL PRICE
Staff Writer

A Fulbright Fellowship has been awarded to a BYU graduate student, according to Robert Laird, assistant dean of the BYU graduate school.

Haderlie, currently working on a master's degree in microbiology, has, through academic excellence, qualified for the fellowship which will allow him to travel to Germany to do research on cancer immunology at noted German institutions, Laird said.

Haderlie's graduate adviser, Dr. Ron W. Leavitt of the microbiology department, said of the research, "Evidence indicates that cancer cells can be recognized as being different by the body's immune system, so, presumably, the body's immune system should have some way of doing something about cancer and yet it doesn't seem to be able to deal with it very well," he said.

"People that have cancer in some cases go into what is called spontaneous remission so that their cancer stops and may even completely go away, indicating that there is some mechanism the body has for destroying cancer," Leavitt said.

Leavitt said research at various research centers has found that in laboratory animals there is an antibody formed by the immune system which gets to the cancer cells and covers them so the "killer T" or white cells are unable to destroy the cancer which goes unchecked.

Leavitt said the antibodies which cover up the cancer are called the "blocking factor."

According to Leavitt, he and Haderlie have been working on a system designed to create more "killer T" cells. They have also been developing a way of eliminating the blocking factor so the T cells will be able to destroy the cancer.

"The technique for removing the blocking factor from the blood involves passing the blood over cancer cells that have been killed so that the blocking factors would attach themselves to the cancer cells. This would leave the blood free of the blocking-factor antibodies so that the T lymphocytes or white cells could be pumped back into a person's system and be able to recognize and destroy the cancer.

"If you keep doing this on a continual basis you will dilute out the blocking factor," said Haderlie.

The process would work on a similar principle to a kidney dialysis unit, he said.

Both Haderlie and Leavitt said the research has been limited because funds cannot be obtained to finance the type of research that is needed. Haderlie said this year his reason for choosing Germany as a place to study.

"Germany is more liberal and open with their funding than the U.S.," he said.

Y credit available in travel program

More than 30 travel tours are available through the BYU department of travel study for students wishing to mix travel with their studies.

Interested students can now have access to many different countries through a program called "Learning Vacations," according to Glenna M. Hansen, department administrator.

Most of the opportunities offer between one and three credit hours, depending on the program and area traveled, she said.

"The mission of travel study is to provide the opportunity to go out with an LDS viewpoint—a different perspective," Mrs. Hansen said.

Mrs. Hansen said the same tour held in consecutive years can emphasize different topics depending on the director of the tour and his background.

Dan Hone, another administrator for the department, said in 1974 the study abroad department was created separately from travel study.

"Study abroad offers credit-oriented programs for university students," he said. "In some of these programs credit is required."

In the travel study programs credit is available for those who are interested in it, Hone said. "These tours are not strictly tour-oriented or straight education. They involve on-location lectures, films and slides," he said.

Brooks Haderlie, a BYU graduate student has been awarded a Fulbright Fellowship for cancer research.

Dr. Massey finds out getting shots is not much fun. According to health officials, parents need to keep up with their children's immunization records to ensure proper health care.

Immunizations stressed

By TERRY NANI
Staff Writer

The responsibility of parents to ensure a regular immunization schedule for their children, said Dr. Massey of the Utah County Health Department.

Parents said many parents are not up to date on this aspect of their child's health program thinking that the doctor will take care of it.

Recently, shots were administered to the students while at school coverage was potentially all, Flinders said.

He said the program was stopped because the kids wouldn't cooperate in showing up for the shots not receiving parent-encouragement.

This was particularly the case with booster shots for junior high-aged students.

After problem arose with not maintaining proper records of their children's immunizations. Hence, many were immunized twice for the same thing." He said this over-immunization was reaching those few that are older, and not the ones who really need them.

superintendent of Provo schools, said the health laws changed four years ago. Previous laws required immunizations for youngsters entering kindergarten.

The law now requires pre-school applicants to fulfill necessary immunizations for entrance based on recent research regarding the "earlier-the-better" theory, Vergera said.

"With the current law, we are sure that 98 percent of the children entering the formal school system are immunized," he said.

But the statistics for follow-up boosters 10 years later were probably not nearly as encouraging, he said.

"Immunization responsibility for children and the maintenance of accurate records for their own benefit lies with parents," Vergera said. He said the districts do an excellent job in maintaining health records for their students also.

The Utah County Health Department lists the immunization requirement by law for those entering kindergarten as follows: four DPT (diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus), four oral polio vaccines and one MMR (measles, mumps, rubella).

Y artists help Orem animators

By PAM NIELSEN
Staff Writer

BYU art students are helping make cartoons for television and learning to become animation professionals under the guidance of former Walt Disney cartoonists in Orem.

Westwind Productions, a syndicated cartoon company that grew out of Walt Disney, has been hiring local and BYU students since its opening early this year. According to Grenade Curran, operations studio manager, there is no other type of animation school of this kind in the nation.

The company operated in Salt Lake City for three years before moving to Orem.

John Ahern, owner of Westwind, said when he was looking for a city to settle his company, the Wasatch Front looked promising. "There was BYU, Utah Technical College, the University of Utah, Park City, a lot of local talent and three major networks in the area," he said.

Ahern was one of Walt Disney's animation men for more than 12 years. "In 1955 I took a portfolio into Disney studios and had an interview. I just walked in at a good time — they were hiring, and I got the job."

Curran said, "Ahern, with over 650 film credits, was formerly head of production of Hanna-Barbera in Hollywood. He is presently the head of production of Taft-Ruby and Spears in Hollywood."

He has handled 14 network shows including "Batman and Robin," "Superman," "Popeye," "The Flintstones," "The Jetsons" and "Charlotte's Web" besides working on Walt Disney's full-length features "Lady and the Tramp," "101 Dalmatians," "Jungle Book" and "Sleeping Beauty," Curran said.

Westwind does the design and layouts of "Thundarr, the Barbarian," a Saturday morning cartoon show.

A new cartoon, designed after the actress Goldie Hawn in the movie "Private Benjamin," entitled "Goldie Goo" will be airing this fall, he said.

Curran said the storyboarders for the cartoon shows are done in Los Angeles at Taft-Ruby and Spears.

The storyboard, a scene-by-scene rough artistic sketch, helps the artists at Westwind complete the cartoon's final draft.

Westwind begins the storyboard layout and does everything that is animated and drawn, Curran said. An episode may include 300 to 350 scenes. A half-hour show includes up to 1,000 drawings, he said. The backgrounds are drawn first, and then the action is overlaid onto the backgrounds.

"This is very advanced artwork," Curran said. "Our artists do everything from layout, drawing scenes and characters and designing the new characters. We have file drawers full of backgrounds such as airports, jungles, deserts, castles, amusement parks, animals and graveyards."

Curran said artists need this help in designing their backgrounds because sometimes they run into difficulties such as those between an African and South African jungle.

Forest Service official gives cautions

By TRACIE SMITH
Staff Writer

Camping and hiking excursions in the local forest areas are not always as carefree as many people expect them to be, according to Brian Forest Service.

Many campers and hikers encounter hazards which could have been avoided by advanced planning and simple precautionary measures.

Fire hazards should be given a high priority at this time of year, said Brandt. The Wasatch Front has a closure currently in effect.

Fire danger can be minimized with a few simple precautions, Brandt said. The while around a campfire should be cleared back three feet in all directions and down to the mineral soil, removing all pine needles and debris. A bucket of water and a shovel should be kept close to the campfire, and the fire should be extinguished by stirring water and dirt into it with a shovel.

Another common hazard not considered by many campers is infection by bacteria in the water. Mountain streams and lakes which look small and taste fine can contain a harmful microscopic organism which leads to intestinal disorder.

To avoid this bacteria, the Forest Service suggests either carrying a supply of water from home, or boiling the water.

Wild animals are occasionally a problem to campers in the area, Brandt said. He suggests keeping food, or anything that smells like food, away from the tent and in immediate area. Burning leftover food and food packages is also wise, he said.

Hiking presents some unique hazards, Brandt said. People who go hiking in the high country should not realize the changes in climate and conditions which accompany a drastic change in altitude.

He said many hikers have suffered from exposure and hypothermia or have been trapped because they assumed that good weather at the beginning

Steve Keesle, a senior majoring in art from Henderson, Nev., looks over a storyboard layout for the final draft of a cartoon at Westwind Productions. Keesle is one of several Y students helping at the Orem based animation studio.

The artists work on metal precision hand-tool machines which encase a circular-shaped glass with a light behind it so the artist can see through more than one sheet of paper.

The studio has a Xerox machine which outlines the drawings with black lines. "Disney used to employ 190 women to draw the black lines. Today, we have a machine that does it all for us. It takes less than a minute to produce a 30-minute program which used to take a year to complete."

Curran said his specialty is live-action film. He was involved in the production of Disney's "Davy Crockett" and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea."

"We are not working on a full-length motion picture which is an American Western about Mormon Church history. The film focuses on the Johnston army of 5,000 men sent West by President Buchanan to fight the Mormons," Curran said.

Ahern said his 20 to 25-person current staff could quadruple in the future. "Basically, we will be dealing with commercial film, television and industrial films and LDS Church films. The volume of work will be more than that of all the studios in Hollywood combined," he said.

From the opening notes of Pat Travers' first album, to the screaming twin-guitar riffs of the recent Go For What You Know LP, the guitar reigns supreme. During the mid-70's, many rock and roll exponents were trying old tricks or struggling to replicate the spark of the late 60's. Travers, on the other hand, was busy forging a power trio, refining his spontaneous go-for-broke leads and highly developed rhythmic style. Today, he can make his strings sing with leaping legates, jump in tightly fused rhythms or cry with bent notes packed with enough blues to stop a dawn.

You have a variety of rhythms available when you select a Baldwin Fender/Rhodes. Easy as one, two, three ... you can make your own music with a Baldwin. Push one of the 17 rhythm buttons and choose a headbop, pop rock, old time waltz or bossa nova. Hold down one key with one finger of your left hand on the rhythm section keyboard and it plays for you the whole rhythm section of a band. Play a melody with one finger of your right hand on the solo keyboard. It's versatile, realistic and easy to play. Could you ask for more? WAKEFIELD'S INC., 78 North University Avenue, 375-1243. ## Y Professor gets Fulbright spot

A BYU associate professor has been named as a Fulbright lecturer in Finland for the first half of 1982 by the U.S. International Communication Agency and the Board of Foreign Scholarships.

Royal J. Skousen, an associate professor of English, said he will lecture on phonological theory, probability and statistics in linguistics, and conduct research on Finnish morphology at the University of Tampere.

Skousen said he will be moving in mid-December to Finland with his wife, Strick, a native of Finland, and their six children, three of whom will be attending Finnish schools during their six-month stay.

"We are really enthused about moving to Finland, although the children are a little scared about going," he said.

The Skousen family has been preparing for the transition they will make by setting aside certain time of the day during which the family speaks only Finnish. "We feel that this will give the children a good sense of the language," he said.

New system needed to decide stand-ins for absent officers

It recently came to our attention that non-elected appointees have been voting on ASBYU's Executive Council during the absence of some council members. This procedure is unfair to BYU students, and ASBYU urgently needs to follow through with its stated intention of rectifying the situation as soon as the Executive Council convenes in the fall.

The problems caused by an ASBYU officer appointing a friend to act while he is out of town should be clear. The appointee was never elected to that position by the student body, and the voting students had no idea whom the ASBYU candidate would appoint during a summer leave. Essentially then, a situation exists where a voting member of the Executive Council can't be truly representing a majority of the student body because most of the students don't know who he/she is.

This appointee votes on many issues important to students, including how some ASBYU funds are spent.

Americans would raise a scream of protest if President Reagan took a world cruise each summer and appointed a friend to manage the country while he was gone. BYU students should protest just as much the similar situation existing here.

ASBYU officers are not to blame for this problem. ASBYU's bylaws make no provisions for replacing elected officers who will be gone for the summer term. Officers have merely been following a precedent set in 1979.

To avoid the problems which could occur from appointing summer fill-ins there are several actions ASBYU can take:

When the elected Executive Council reconvenes in the fall, changing the bylaws to eliminate summer appointees should take place immediately.

ASBYU officers should be required to be on campus for the full year of their term.

If serving for a full year isn't feasible and the system of appointees continues, they should be allowed to participate in council meetings but without the right to vote.

If ASBYU can offer a better solution to this problem it would be welcomed, but the present system should be done away with as soon as possible.

Horses exalted

Editor: How dare Jay Evensen write such an article about the most beautiful animal in the world? The reason we place horses on such a pedestal is because that's where they belong. Jay, haven't you ever stood in awe as you watched a horse run across a field? Compare any cow or pig to that one! Horses have feelings. They're the most lovable, personable animals I know of. I suggest you read "Black Beauty" a few times over before you try to write another article like that. And try to get used to eating dried peas and beans. They're better for you than any steak, cow or horse.

System suggested

Editor: While cogitating recently on the prevalent problem of obeying President Kimball's counsel to "do it" in reference to our eternal salvation (i.e., marriage), we determined the solution to this problem lies in providing adequate, available resources in obtaining the necessary information to accomplish this task.

After being reminded that the library is usually the place to find reference material, or to do research on any task we need to accomplish, we decided to start there. However, we discovered to our dismay that there are no resources available in the library telling us where members of the opposite sex can be located. For instance, the chart on the wall does not include this subject in its list of floor locations.

For this reason, we submit the following suggestion in order to improve a noticeable lack in the library resource material. We suggest that an addition be made to the current card catalog holdings. For each available man or woman a card would be made up at the time of registration which would include the following information:

The call number (or phone number)
The location (address)
Subject matter (name of person), and copyright date (birthdate)

Brief description
Cross references (any other person who knows this individual well, such as friends, roommates, teachers, church leaders, etc.)

We believe such an addition to the current library facilities would greatly ameliorate the present conditions of the task before us. We also believe that since it is the acknowledged objective of many coeds to get their MRS degree, this system would facilitate their research and be greatly welcomed.

We realize there are probably a few bugs in our suggestion, but we would be more than willing to work with the student body representatives in ironing them out.

Unflushed toilets on campus show childishness of students

The other day on entering a restroom in a dorm I once lived in, an extraordinary scene greeted me. A young man was standing before one of the lavatory bowls muttering something in a seemingly disapproving manner. As I approached, I was able to understand his whispered broken sentences.

"Stupid freshmen!" I heard, and the thought entered my mind that the poor freshmen were probably blamed for everything that happened on campus.

"I just can't believe it," he went on, "didn't their parents teach them anything?" About then he noticed me.

"Can you believe it?" he asked, looking me square in the eye.

"Believe what?" I asked.

"These toilets," he replied.

"Yes, toilets," he replied. "Look at that." He pointed to the unflushed bowl in front of him. "You'd think a person could at least have the decency to reach down and press the little handle after they use it."

"Don't they?"

"Not most of the time," he flared. "There hasn't been one day since I've been here that I haven't come into a campus bathroom to find an unflushed toilet staring me in the face. It's disgusting."

He went on to explain that he thought the university should add another class to its G.E. program. "And this class," he announced to me, standing in front of that unflushed bowl, "should be called Basic Bathroom Etiquette 100 D."

I didn't intend to laugh at his statement, but I couldn't help myself.

"It's not funny," he reproached.

"This is a real problem that goes on in every dorm and every bathroom on campus. We, you and I, are living with a bunch of babies who don't even know they should take the time to flush a toilet after using it. They are worse than babies, refusing to obey simple rules of everyday cleanliness."

His arguments seemed sound, but I wondered if it was really worth all the emotion he was putting into it. After all, isn't that what causes ulcers? Still, as I contemplated the situation, I couldn't help but agree with him. It is more pleasant (and sanitary) to find a clear, empty, unsmelly bowl when one needs to relieve one's self.

I congratulated the young man on his oration and assured him that I, as a BYU student and an American, would make sure to flush that toilet every time.

Satisfied, he turned and marched out the door, leaving me in front of the unflushed toilet.

As I reached to do the honors, I couldn't help but wonder if he was a freshman.

Students steal from merchants

BYU students often complain about difficulty cashing checks in the Provo-Orem area. They moan about students not being able to afford check guarantee cards or merchants not accepting out-of-state checks. Maybe merchants don't want to take checks because of the thousands of dollars they lose through bad checks from BYU students each year.

At the end of each semester and term, BYU students pack their worldly possessions and go off to new jobs or home to earn money. They close their checking accounts at various local banks, then write checks for rent, groceries, bills or just for cash. Then they skip out of town, knowing they have written bad checks. This leaves local businesses holding the bad checks with empty tills.

Since many BYU students are not from Utah, merchants hesitate to take action to collect a $20 check. Merchants feel this would cost them more than it would save, so most students are off the hook.

Stringent action should be taken against students who knowingly write bad checks. Upon admittance to BYU, students agree to live a "style of our own."

Included in this is living the commandments—one of which is pretty specific about theft. And that is what writing a bad check knowingly is — theft.

While the cases of bad checks from BYU may be too numerous for BYU staff members to track down and execute, some action should certainly be taken.

Maybe local merchants could report bad checks to BYU. Then BYU could deny class registration grades or diplomas until the matter is cleared up.

Perhaps bishops should start asking specifically about bad checks during temple interviews. As it is, many bad check writers skip happily off to the temple, recommend in hand, not giving the theft another thought.

If BYU students persist in living the law of Moses, maybe they should be punished by the law of Moses. In Moses' day, thieves had their hands cut off so they couldn't steal again.

Hopefully, BYU students will start to live the standards they are capable of living. And they will stop writing bad checks.

—Jan Taylor

Quarterback McMahon will win Heisman Trophy

BYU All-American quarterback Jim McMahon will win the 1981 Heisman Trophy!

Unless McMahon breaks his arm, or his receivers have terminal arthritis, BYU will finally get the national media recognition in football that it has deserved for many years by laying claim to the most prestigious trophy in collegiate athletics.

And why not?

Until Gale Brown's miracle catch during the final seconds of the 1980 Holiday Bowl, BYU's football program had been regarded as a fluke, a joke to many areas outside of the Western Athletic Conference.

But not anymore.

Even with the departure of offensive coordinator Doug Seovil to San Diego State during the off-season, the Cougars' passing attack will be as dazzling as ever.

Strapped during the spring and summer months with some injuries, the offensive line will be healthy and hungry before the WAC battles, which should keep defenders on their toes throughout the season, and McMahon free to let the ball soar through the air.

If the 1981 Heisman Trophy were awarded today, based on 1980 statistics, McMahon would win the award hands down.

According to the NCAA, McMahon is the leading candidate for the Heisman Trophy.

He completed an incredible 263 of 445 pass attempts for 4,452 yards for a 63.8 percentage rating.

McMahon threw 17 interceptions, but also became the only collegiate player to pass for over 4,000 yards in one season.

McMahon broke the long standing record for total offense (4,627) yards passing (4,571), and touchdowns (47).

In all, Jim McMahon broke over 32 NCAA passing and total offensive records.

So in this scribe's opinion, Jim McMahon will finally achieve what every football player in the USA today craves more than a Big Mac.

The Heisman Trophy.

But, what then?

With everyone beating down Jimmy's front door to get him to sign a professional football contract, quiet negotiations will continue in the real offices of BYU Athletic Director Glen Tuckett.

Working with various officials from the PAC-10, Big-10, and Southwest Conference, Tuckett has been and will continue to schedule various debuts of the BYU Cougars at football stadiums throughout the nation.

With the advent of the enlarged Cougar football stadium, bigger and better football teams will make their sojourn to Provo, thus creating even more national headlines for Cougar fans to enjoy.

But a lot hinges on this coming year, and when McMahon wins the Heisman Trophy, football at BYU will be forever changed.

After the awards ceremony is completed in New York City, and McMahon returns to Utah with the coveted trophy in hand, BYU will be on the top of the hill.

The leader of all collegiate football teams in the nation.

No longer will fans gasp, "Well, maybe next year when we get that special junior college or freshman player," or say, "Wow, what have happened if that tight end would have reached out his hand and caught the ball for the winning touchdown?"

Those days of guessing are gone forever.

The future of BYU football is here today!

BYU will go undefeated in the 12 game season; win the Holiday Bowl for the second year in a row; finish the season ranked among the top 10 teams in the nation; and Jim McMahon will win the 1981 Heisman Trophy!

In the immortal words of George Allen, "The future is now!"
